

“Not only is another world possible, she is on her way. On a quiet day, I can hear her breathing.”
— Arundhati Roy

So, as we move into this election and the future that lies beyond it, it is more important to ask “What kind of world do we want to live in?” than “Who will lead us there?”

At best, a leader may inspire us to hope for that world. But we cannot leave the work of realizing our hopes to anyone other than ourselves. And as we move forward, our greatest enemy is fear — fear that we will fail, fear that we will not be strong enough, safe enough, good enough.

Fear is the enemy of hope: it is the voice that keeps us from believing that we can succeed. Those who are invested in maintaining the status quo know this, and this is why they so often use fear as a way to ensure our complacency. So, this election year, we have a clear choice to make: fear or hope.

Choose Hope in 2008!

Created by the Ministry of Propaganda.
All materials available for free download
at www.TheMOP.info.

“Not only is another world possible, she is on her way. On a quiet day, I can hear her breathing.”
— Arundhati Roy

So, as we move into this election and the future that lies beyond it, it is more important to ask “What kind of world do we want to live in?” than “Who will lead us there?”

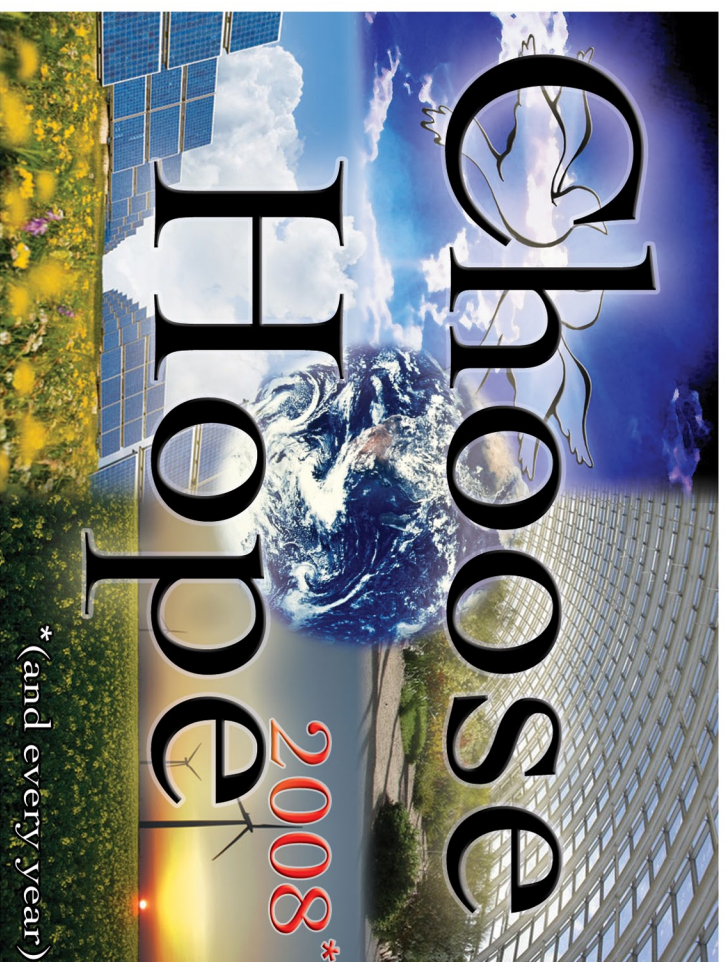

At best, a leader may inspire us to hope for that world. But we cannot leave the work of realizing our hopes to anyone other than ourselves. And as we move forward, our greatest enemy is fear — fear that we will fail, fear that we will not be strong enough, safe enough, good enough.

Fear is the enemy of hope: it is the voice that keeps us from believing that we can succeed. Those who are invested in maintaining the status quo know this, and this is why they so often use fear as a way to ensure our complacency. So, this election year, we have a clear choice to make: fear or hope.

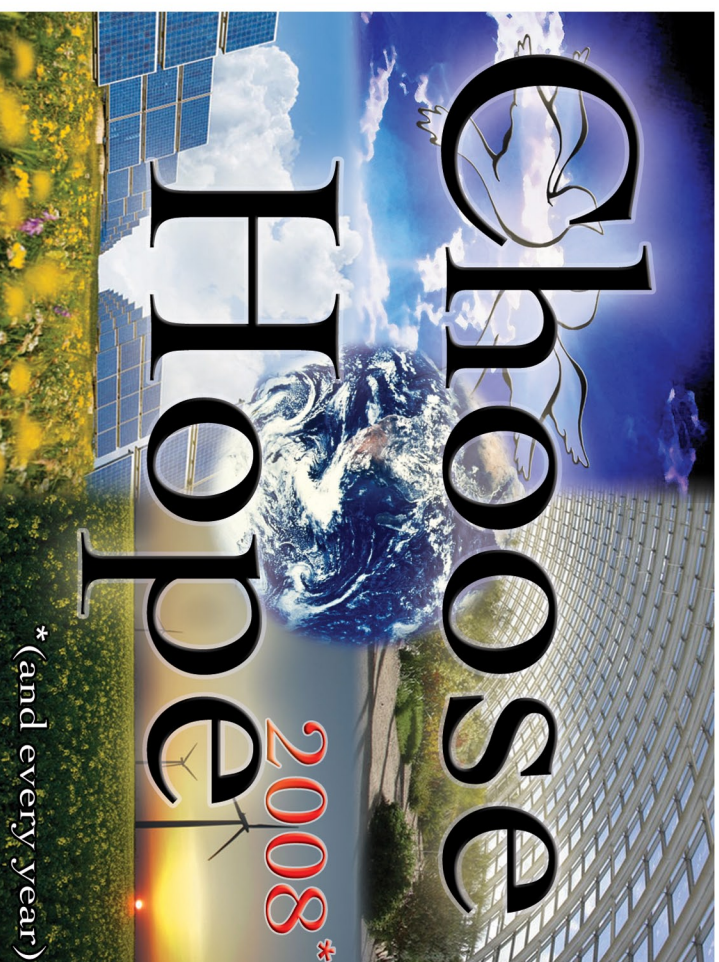

Choose Hope in 2008!

Created by the Ministry of Propaganda.
All materials available for free download
at www.TheMOP.info.

*(and every year)

*(and every year)