

"To exist is to change, to change is to mature, to mature is to go on creating oneself endlessly."

— Henri Bergson

But another, perhaps more important reason why evolution serves a moral function is that it empowers us to make better choices. In a universe ruled by a God who dictates everything that happens, there is little room for ethical actions. However, if life is a collaborative process between organisms and their environments, then every choice we make has the power to promote life or death, growth or stagnation.

So the next time someone argues that the only true moral perspective is that God controls everything, you might suggest that a process of conscious evolution is, in fact the more ethical perspective.

For that matter, if someone tells you that God is responsible for the design of nature, you might point out that God, clearly, encourages collaboration with difference and conservation of resources.

Because after all, nothing is more intelligent than cooperation, and evolution is one intelligent design.

Created by the Ministry of Propaganda.
All materials available for free download at www.TheMOP.info. This Pamphlet is dedicated to that master propagandist, Jack Chick.

"To exist is to change, to change is to mature, to mature is to go on creating oneself endlessly."

— Henri Bergson

But another, perhaps more important reason why evolution serves a moral function is that it empowers us to make better choices. In a universe ruled by a God who dictates everything that happens, there is little room for ethical actions. However, if life is a collaborative process between organisms and their environments, then every choice we make has the power to promote life or death, growth or stagnation.

So the next time someone argues that the only true moral perspective is that God controls everything, you might suggest that a process of conscious evolution is, in fact the more ethical perspective.

For that matter, if someone tells you that God is responsible for the design of nature, you might point out that God, clearly, encourages collaboration with difference and conservation of resources.

Because after all, nothing is more intelligent than cooperation, and evolution is one intelligent design.

Created by the Ministry of Propaganda.
All materials available for free download at
www.TheMOP.info. This Pamphlet is dedicated to that master propagandist, Jack Chick.

